

Obituary

Lois K. Miller, daughter of Charles A. and Florence R. Bloom Turner, was born August 28, 1916, on a farm southwest of Tarkio, Missouri. At the age of two, the family moved to a farm in Washington Township, Northboro, Iowa. Lois attended West Point School through the eighth grade and graduated in 1934, from the Shenandoah High School. On August 18, 1940, Lois married Dwaine E. Miller in Hiawatha, Kansas. They spent four years in Pontiac, Michigan, and during this time Lois worked as a payroll clerk for the State of Michigan. She was a member and the secretary of the Congregational Church in Michigan. Lois and Dwaine were both active members helping with the youth group. In 1949, Lois and Dwaine moved back to their original family farm in Washington Township, where they continued to farm until their retirement. During this period while farming they also dealt in the buying and selling of depression glassware. They attended many shows in the states of Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri and Kansas and because they were so well known for their knowledge and glassware they became known to many as Miller's Glassware. Due to their health in August of 1990, they moved to Shenandoah and celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. Lois also celebrated her 60th Class Reunion in Shenandoah in 1994. She helped with the planning of the reunion and served as Master of Ceremonies. Lois was a member of the Congregational Church in Shenandoah, Iowa.

Lois was preceded in death by her parents, and her husband Dwaine in 1999. She is survived by her sister Jean Johnson of Nevada, nieces, nephews, other relatives and friends, and a very special cousin and his family Rick Apperson and his wife Sandy and their children, who were "just like their own kids."

Following the service, everyone is cordially invited to gather at the Headquarters for a time of refreshment and fellowship.
