Marjorie C. Black

Marjorie C. Black, the daughter of Clarence and Margaret (Ryan) Reavis, was born September 3, 1916, near Imogene, Iowa, and passed away September 28, 1999 at the Good Samaritan Care Center in Red Oak, Iowa.

Growing up in the Shenandoah area, Marge received her education from the Shenandoah school system. She was married to Marland Black on May 20, 1936, at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Shenandoah and to this union, one son, Val, was born.

When they were first married, Marge and Marland lived in Shenandoah for awhile and then moved to Glendale, Arizona where Marland worked in an airplane-manufacturing factory. They moved back to Shenandoah where Marge was employed at the Tip Top Café and later at Henry Fields and then Lawson Jewelry for 16 years. Marge and Marland also started the Tip Top Taxi Service in Shenandoah. Marge was a member of St. Mary's Catholic Church where she enjoyed being part of the Regina Guild. She was known for her cleanliness, always having everything in its place. Even her yard was kept with care. Marge had a great Irish sense of humor. She believed the world would be a better place if everyone would have a good laugh. She enjoyed playing golf and especially spending time with her family.

Preceding Marge in death were her parents, Clarence and Margaret Reavis; her husband, Marland, April 7, 1999; three brothers, Edward, Galen and Nick Reavis; and a sister, Kathryn Rhoades. Survivors include her son, Val Black and his wife Julie of Shenandoah; grandchildren, Timothy Black of Clarinda, IA, Anthony Black of Arlington, VA, Teresa Foo of Council Bluffs, IA, Ann Jacola of Shenandoah, and Ted Black of Red Oak, IA, twelve great-grandchildren; plus other relatives and friends.
